

As part of the options offered to satellite subscribers I would like to suggest that major network stations in all time zones be added to the mix. While I would still favor my local stations, it would be very nice to be able to watch the morning news programs when I first get up instead of just a small part of it when I am leaving for work, or an awards show live instead of tape delayed. With the acceptance of XM and Sirius competing with local radio stations, as well as major market radio stations available on the internet, there is no reason why local television stations should continue to hold network monopolies.
